Community Helps Restore Vandalized Cemetery

June 14, 2006

Some of the area's earliest residents are not resting in peace.

Lisa O'Hearn was renovating the Kerr-Drill Cemetery when it was vandalized five months ago. Now, she raising money to fix it back up.

She's asking people in the community to roll their sleeves up... Saying if they help build it, they'll help protect it.

Lisa has been teaching everyone who helps a little about history. She says the people buried there are not only deceased Daytonians, but cornerstones of The Miami Valley.

In August, a geology professor from Wright State will be using a radar to find the tombs of those buried in the cemetery. That way, even though the headstones are destroyed, the graves will still have markers.

If you'd like to help restore The Kerr-Drill Cemetery, you can donate at Fifth Third Bank. The account is set up under I.C.U.
